34 MILLION RELIEF DEFICIT LEFT BY DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Earle Administration Nears End; Governor Hurls Bitter Parting Shot

CHALLENGES JUDICIARY

Angered at Group Which Permitted Grand Jury Investigation of Activities

By International News Service
HARRISBURG, Jan. 4.—Hurling a defiant, almost bitter challenge to a Pennsylvania judiciary that permitted a Grand Jury investigation of his administration, Governor George Earle today prepared to lay aside the duties of chief executive, as legislators perused copies of his farewell address to the General Assembly.

Coupled with the Governor's parting shot at the court, was the revelation that the Earle administration would leave a $34,000,000 relief deficit as it releases its four year Democratic stewardship, the first in 44 years.

The Republican controlled house, however, took immediate steps to meet the emergency relief crisis predicted by January 7 by passing five bills designed to tap government special funds for $34,000,000, including a $12,000,000 appropriation to the Department of Public Assistance, immediately upon final passage. Earle deplored the "encroachment of politically minded judiciary, protected by the sanctity of its robe, and the tenure of its office upon the prerogatives of the chief executive and sovereign state."

Voit Funeral Will Be Conducted On Friday

At a post mortem conducted yesterday into cause of death of Frank T. Voit, it was determined that death was due to monoxide gas poisoning.

The body of Mr. Voit was found by John S. Williams, slumped over the steering wheel of his automobile, when Mr. Williams went to the jointly-occupied garage at the rear of 415 Radcliffe street. In ending his life, Mr. Voit had used a garden hose, attached to the exhaust pipe, and then extending through the ventilator. The end of the hose lay in his lap, and newspaper was stuffed about the ventilator.

The funeral, to which relatives and friends, members of Bristol Rotary Club, and Bristol Lodge of Elks, are invited, will be held on Friday at two p. m. from the Voit home, 325 Radcliffe street. Interment will be made in Bristol Cemetery, with the H. S. Rue Estate, funeral directors, in charge. Friends may call Thursday evening.

Class of '37, Bristol High, Has Delightful Reunion

The second annual reunion of the class of 1937, Bristol high school, was held on Friday evening in the Surf Room of the Hotel Hildebrecht, Trenton, N. J. During the evening, officers were elected for terms of three years, and suggestions made for organization of an alumni association. New officers chosen are: President, Miss Dora Waldron; vice-president, Paul Vandegrift; secretary, Miss Evelyn Greenwood; treasurer, Miss Muriel Sheldon.

The group included 32 members of the class, with superintendent of schools, Warren P. Snyder; Mrs. Snyder, Miss Gladys Hewitt, and Miss Alethia Myers, as guests.

Mr. Snyder entertained with camera slides of snap-shots taken when the class was in Washington in May of 1937. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing, to the strains of orchestra music.

G. O. P. CONTROLS BOTH HOUSES OF ASSEMBLY

House and Senate Adjourn To Await Inauguration of Gov.-Elect James

A TURBULENT SESSION

By Raymond Wilcox
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Jan. 4.—(INS)—CH—maxing one of the most extraordinary and turbulent legislative sessions in the history of Pennsylvania, the General Assembly adjourned today to await the inauguration of Governor-elect Arthur H. James with both House and Senate under Republican control.

Adjournment came shortly after 2 a. m. after an organization fight in the Senate which kept that body in riotous confusion for 13 consecutive hours. The House agreed to meet again on January 16, the Senate on January 17, when Governor-elect James will be sworn in.

While organization of the House, where the Republicans hold a 129-79 majority, went ahead smoothly, in the Senate legislative scenes said to be unparalleled in the history of the state took place as both parties jockeyed back and forth fighting for control.

After putting on one of the greatest exhibitions of parliamentary dueling in the Legislature's history the Democrats went down to defeat when one of their own members—Sen. William J. Eroe, Jr., of Lawrence—went over to the Republicans and voted to elect Senator Frederick T. Gelder, Susquehanna, as president pro tem. The vote was 23 to 22.

Following this, Senator Eroe switched back to the Democratic side and aided the Democrats to elect all other Senate officials and employees.

The defection of Senator Eroe snatched control of the Senate from out of the very fingers of the Democrats who had outmaneuvered Republican strategists in the Senate to obtain a 22-22 tie, with Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Kennedy preparing to cast the deciding vote for the Democrats.

The Democrats achieved this astounding result, all the more amazing with three Democratic Senators absent by seating Sen.-elect Herbert S. Levin, Philadelphia Democrat, in defiance of a State Supreme Court edict, and by refusing to seat three Republican Senators-elect. The defection of Senator Eroe brought all their efforts to naught, however, but it provided the Senate with one of the most amazing episodes in its history.

In sharp contrast to the hectic scenes in the Senate were the House proceedings. There the Republicans quickly organized the House, elected Rep. Ellwood J. Turner, Delaware, speaker, and then introduced five measures to alleviate a threatened depletion of relief funds. One bill appropriated $12,000,000 for the Department of Public Assistance, while the other four measures transferred $34,000,000 from State funds to the Treasury. Of this amount, $26,000,000 came from the motor vehicle fund and the remaining $8,000,000 from the liquor license fund, the liquid fuels fund and the State Insurance fund. The bills were given second reading at a midnight session and thus prepared for early approval when the Legislature reconvenes.

The Senate organization fight dragged on so long that the final address of Gov. George H. Earle, tentatively slated to be heard at 3 p. m. was never delivered. Instead the Legislature, meeting in a half-hour session at 12.45 this morning, merely had the title of the address read and printed copies were then distributed to members. Governor Earle himself did not appear.

BABY ARRIVES

A daughter, Lillie Elizabeth, was born January 1st to Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Robinson, at their home, Cedar avenue and State road, Croydon. The birth occurred on the second wedding anniversary and birthday anniversary of Mrs. Robinson.

The average of 825 lbs. 4.31% milk, the organization formed during the summer. The members discussed the plan of the borough's borrowing equipment from each other and paying a rental fee with the association acting as a clearing house. A report on the matter was made by Dayton Knipe, Telford, chairman of the committee investigating the project.

Herman Winger, of Sellersville, chairman of the committee on co-operative buying among the boroughs, made his report. This matter was also discussed in detail.

About twenty representatives from Sellersville, East Greenville, Perkaspie, Telford and Sellersville, attended the meeting. R. F. Stackel, president of Sellersville Borough Council, is president. The secretary is C. R. Witmer, also of Sellersville. The association takes in the territory in Bucks county to Riegelsville and in Montgomery county to Lansdale.

A covered dish supper is being arranged by the Boosters to be served in the Fallington school on the evening of January 9, at 6.15.

Mrs. Leighton Batten will be in charge of the arrangements, assisted by Mrs. John Drews, Mrs. Walter Hann, Mrs. A. V. Hartley, Mrs. Harvey Wolfe, Mrs. Eugene Quillen, Mrs. Arthur Sterling, Mrs. Andrew J. Chamberlin and Mrs. Alvan C. Thompson.

At a recent meeting the Boosters reported $100 had been turned over to the Fallington School Board. This money was raised by the club at a card party, held recently in the community hall, Mrs. Andrew J. Chamberlin was in charge of the party.

The post-office at Quakertown handled approximately 75,000 greeting cards during the Christmas season. Cancellation totaled 2534 more pieces than last year, according to Postmaster Harold Heimbach.

In a normal week the post-office cancels about 15,000 pieces of mail. Two weeks before Christmas 22,892 pieces were cancelled, and the week before Christmas, 83,640 pieces, a total of 106,532, as compared to 103,998 in 1937.

December 19, 20 and 21 were the big stamp selling days, when 1 1/2 cent stamps were most in demand. On December 19, 18,000 were sold, December 20, 12,000, and on December 21 11,000, making a total of 41,000 1 1/2-cent stamps sold in three days. The total number sold in December was 65,000. This number, augmented by those greetings bearing 2 and 3 cent stamps, made the total number of greetings approximately 75,000.

During the last two weeks before Christmas, 155 more incoming parcels were delivered than in the corresponding period last year. The 1937 figures are 2,458 parcels, and 2,614 parcels this year.

For the same period, 222 more insured parcels were mailed at Quakertown than in the same period in 1937. In 1937 there were 576 insured parcels and this year 798 insured parcels.

No record is kept of ordinary parcels, but it is estimated by the stamp sales, and by the business transacted in the parcel post windows that there was about a 10 per cent. increase over last year.

Cooperative plans of using expensive equipment and of buying were discussed at the quarterly meeting of the North Penn Association of Boroughs held in the borough hall, at Sellersville. This was the third meeting of

Hiranuma To Form New Cabinet

Tokyo, Jan. 4.—Baron Hiranuma, president of the Privy Council, and left wing political leader, tonight was commanded to form a new cabinet to replace that of Prince Konye.

The advent to power to Hiranuma after resignation of Konye, because of disagreement over policies affecting the Sino-Japanese war, was interpreted in Tokyo as a long stride in the direction of outright Fascism.

He enjoys the widest support of the Japanese army and military circles, and is regarded as certain to accept the premiership.

President To Address Congress

Washington, Jan. 4.—Shortly after noon today, President Roosevelt will report to the newly-elected Congress on "The State of The Nation," particularly as it has been affected by dangerous international developments.

As has been his custom, the President will deliver his annual message in person to a joint session of the Senate and House, assembled in the House chamber.

RE-ELECT OFFICERS OF FALLS CO. OF SAFETY

Edward Scarborough Again Chosen President; Hold A Dinner Session

FIRST ENTRY IN 1838

FALLSINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Fallsington Company of Safety held its annual meeting Saturday afternoon, at the Glass House Restaurant, Lincoln Point. Formerly it was called the "Horse Company," and these meetings have been held annually for a number of years.

Years ago there was a committee appointed to have full charge of the supper, both in buying and serving. The suppers were held in the basement of the community house, then afterwards held on the second floor. They are now held in some restaurant.

In the minute book, the Falls Company of Safety dates back to "First Month, 6th, 1838," when the first entry was made. Some of the persons having charge when first started, were: Joseph Brown, Andrew Moon, Esek Howell, Robert Lovett, George Comfort and Joseph Burton.

At the meeting held on Saturday afternoon, the same officers were elected. They are: President, Edward Scarborough; vice-president, Albert Hibbs; treasurer, Clinton Neagley; secretary, Herman Heaven.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Not A Good Idea

IN THE coming session of Congress and throughout the New Year the subject of national defense will be very much to the front. The President is expected to devote the major part of his Wednesday message to this question, and already there has developed wide divergence of view. The Administration politicians want one thing; the technical men of the army and navy another. To decide upon the sound approach is the vital task of his Congress.

IT MAY not be wise to add to its burdens in this matter, but there is one phase which, so far as the President is concerned, seems already to have been decided and which it would seem expedient for Congress at least to reflect upon before acquiescing in. This is contained in the announcement that the important job of training young men to fly airplanes would be financed by the National Youth Administration, and that the ground crews essential for their operation would be trained by the NYA.

AT THE risk of being called that dreadful thing, a "red baiter," by the soap-box "liberals" it is ventured to point out one or two things in this connection. In the first place it will hardly be denied that the most direct—and desired—road to the revolutionary aims of the Communist leaders is through the armed forces of a nation. It is their ideal goal. Infection of the army and navy with their doctrines would more quickly insure the end of our system and the substitution of theirs than anything else. Certainly, however

Audrey Poulette Observes Her Fifth Anniversary

Audrey Poulette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Poulette, Wilson avenue, celebrated her fifth birthday anniversary, Saturday afternoon, by entertaining a number of little friends from two to four o'clock. Games were played, and Arlene Goodspeed received a prize for pinning the tail on the donkey. The dining room was decorated with pink, yellow and green balloons. A large birthday cake graced the center of the table, favors were bon-bons and small baskets of candies. The cake decorations and favors were in the colors pink, yellow and green. Audrey received many gifts.

Those present: Joseph Tingle, Jr., Janice Buckman, William White, Ethel Villas, James Wright, Nora McGee, Elwood Rothenberger, Judith Wright, Robert Nonini, Arlene Goodspeed, Frank Kelso.

SCHOOL BOARD AWARDS ROOFING CONTRACT

Keystone Roofing Co., Phila., Lowest Bidder for High School Job

PLACES BID OF $1,939

Keystone Roofing Co., Philadelphia, was awarded the contract for placing a new roof on the high school building. The award was made by the Bristol school board last night when a tabulation of figures showed the Keystone Company to be the lowest of seven bidders. The contract price was $1,939.

The other bidders were: James L. McGee Estate, $2,238; Martin & Breen Co., $2,222; M. G. Kulzer & Sons, Inc., $2,123; Warren-Ehret Co., $2,796; W. Jay Tinney Co., Inc., $2,189; John Wischer, $2,741.47.

All of the bidders except the McGee Estate and Wischer were Philadelphia concerns.

Arthur P. Brady, chairman of Property Committee, informed the board of delays in the work being done at the high school and of the necessity of keeping the high school closed due to the work of installing oil burners not having been completed.

Mr. Brady said: "The responsibility for this delay must rest upon someone." There was general dissatisfaction expressed by the Board over the manner in which the work is progressing.

Mrs. Horace N. Davis, of the school committee, reported having visited the high school three times and also attending Parents' Night. Mrs. Davis expressed her satisfaction with the work of the teachers and also with the choice of reading material she found in the library.

Mr. Brady asked the Board's approval for the installation of a three-phase electric system in the high school. The Board approved the suggestion.

Warren P. Snyder and Emil Metzger were named to represent the Board at the sessions of the Pennsylvania School Directors' Association, which is to be held in Harrisburg.

Mr. Metzger informed the Board that he had a number of books which he intends to present to the school library. He mentioned the titles of the books and the gift was accepted and the thanks of the Board extended.

Hold Township Man Under $500 Bail for Court

Howard Wilson, Jr., Bristol Terrace, was held in $500 bail this morning by Justice of Peace Edward Lynn. Wilson was charged with assault and battery with intent to maim, and pointing a fire-arm with intent to kill. The charges were made by Samuel G. Robbins.

I. L. Rubin, Bristol attorney, represented Wilson.

Robbins testified that he and George Della, Bristol, and Ralph Neitzel, Bath Road, were driving through Featherbed Road, en route to Wilson's house, when Wilson flashed a light in their faces and fired two bullets which "whizzed past the cab" of the Robbins car.

It appeared from the testimony that Robbins was looking for Wilson and had attempted to see him previously but had failed.

ARMED BANDITS GET $17.60 FROM MAN AT SERVICE STATION

Francis Lynn, of Morrisville, Locked in Washroom and Safe is Emptied

OVERLOOK $79 IN HASTE

Bandits Fail to Search Attendant, Who Had Money in His Pockets

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 4.—A night attendant at a service station here was held up and robbed of $17.60 last night. The bandits made their escape, but in their hurry to get away, overlooked

The attendant, Francis Lynn, 25, of Trenton, N. J., is employed at the station of W. B. Steward, Bridge street. Lynn was locked in a washroom. He had $79 in his pockets and the bandits forgot to search him or else were of the impression that all of the money was in Lynn's change container and the safe.

The hold-up occurred shortly before 10 o'clock when many automobiles were traveling along Bridge street at that intersection. Officers were on duty at the time at the Delaware River Bridge entrance about a block away.

Lynn, alone at the time, was standing at one side of the station when he said three men carrying revolvers walked up to him. The spokesman pointed a revolver at him and said "Get inside."

Lynn obeyed and while he was being marched into the washroom one of the men said: "Don't shoot him, Smithy." Lynn was relieved of his money-changer and after the door was locked the bandits rifled the safe and hurried away.

The attendant smashed a window in the small room and climbed out. He telephoned to Trenton police who relayed the message to Officer Joseph Lebern, of Morrisville. Witnesses told police the bandits had a car parked on Clymer avenue, a short distance from the Steward establishment, and saw them drive away.

The car is described as a black sedan with trunk, being a model about eight years old.

Steward said his station was broken into one night six weeks ago and $15 stolen.

Criminal Department of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, Bristol, and Officer Cooper of Morrisville, were also summoned.

It is believed the trio is the same that staged hold-ups in Crosswicks, N. J., at three a. m., and in Trenton, N. J., at 7.30 p. m. At the former place the attendant shot at the bandits, and it is thought wounded one.

AS WE TRAVEL

They say that the latest product of American airplane factories will have luxuries rivaling those of ocean liners or crack trains. It is a Boeing clipper, now awaiting final tests by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. When these are completed and if satisfactory, the airship will be placed in service on either the Asiatic or European transoceanic route.

We read that it will have accommodations for 74 passengers, that it has a dining salon and recreational center, that it has a bridal suite, that it has upholstered chairs and rich carpets and Venetian blinds, along with sleeping compartments, dressing rooms and all the other conveniences and luxuries that go with expensive travel.

Along with this bit of travel news is the information from Erie, Pa., that a "new streamlined, projectile-like locomotive, capable of pulling fifteen standard sleeping cars 125 miles an hour, was unveiled here today." It will have its operating tests in runs between Buffalo and Cleveland.

What a hurrying old world it is, to be sure. Too bad we don't know just what to do with the time we think it so necessary to save.

OFF THE HEARTH

The cricket on the hearth may be a very cheerful sort of companion. But in the West, where millions of crickets are a threat to forage on the dwindling public range, they sing no songs of praise to the chirping insect. Instead they are preparing to commit mass murder.

The work will be centered largely in Nevada, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Washington, Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota and Nebraska, where scientists estimate the pests have infested at least 18,000,000 acres of land.

One of the control methods to be used will be the erection of metal barriers beyond which crickets can not pass. When they reach the barriers the crickets will fall into traps. Another method will be the dusting of infected areas with poisonous mixtures which, while not harmful to livestock will result in the destruction of crickets and their eggs.

The boys of the CCC have been picked to do the job. They will do their best to make the crickets wish they had stuck to the hearth.

TWO AND TWO MAKE WHAT

Secretary Wallace insists that although the tobacco and rice growers have turned down federal regulation of marketing—that is, in effect, crop restriction—and only the cotton growers have voted for it, the result proves that a "preponderant majority" of the farmers have shown themselves to be in favor of these policies of the Administration.

Out of five referenda, four rejected the Wallace theories of control. In the Wallace conception, four defeats out of five constitute a victory. If Mr. Wallace were seated in the little red school house on the hill, we wonder just what he would find that two and two make.

Roosevelt says he will donate his mother's home at Hyde Park to the Government for a Roosevelt memorial, but what many think this country needs is a site for a New Deal zoo.

It is an unjust reflection on the brave generations preceding ours to feel that what happened under the mistletoe happened only under the mistletoe.

THE spectacle of an organization schools is to be established with NYA funds to train the skilled mechanics without which no fleet of planes can operate, and that the NYA will do the training? The answer is Aubrey Williams. Now Mr. Williams is not a Communist and has no desire to overturn our form of government and set up another along Soviet lines. Nevertheless, the undisputed facts about him are such as to unfit him for head of the NYA if the NYA is to be entrusted with this exceedingly vital business.

BECAUSE, while Mr. Williams isn't a Communist, he is an enthusiastic friend and indorser of an organization which was created by the Communists, has been nurtured by them, is directed and controlled by them. These things were recently publicly charged, with a wealth of evidence, by the Rev. Stanley High in his remarkable Saturday Post article, to which no exception has been taken. In it Mr. High quoted Mr. Williams as having said he hoped to see the day when every man and woman on relief would be a member of the Workers Alliance. In it, too, he quoted Mr. Williams as eulogizing David Lasser, head of this organization, to the point of saying that the moments spent with him were the most "memorable of my life." Also it was to this Workers Alliance that Mr. Williams directed some of his own inflammatory and highly criticized utterances.

whose purpose is to put pressure upon a Government agency being embraced and indorsed by an active head of the agency upon which the pressure is to be put, of course, is unprecedented and shocking—even if there were no Communist flavor to the Alliance. It was this exhibition, coupled with his various indiscretions, which made it necessary for the President to pass Mr. Williams by as successor to Mr. Hopkins, it being quite certain that he would not be confirmed by the Senate.

WHOLLY aside from the fact that the NYA funds are relief funds and to use them for training aviators or aviation mechanics is doing exactly the thing the President three weeks ago said he would not do—namely, confuse the defense program with either relief or recovery—aside from that, to announce that Mr. Williams, ardent friend of Lasser, indorser of the Workers Alliance and fomenter of class hatred, is to be in charge of so vital a matter as the training of aviation mechanics is not reassuring. Altogether it is a queer idea which the President hardly could have thought of. Mr. Williams may be as patriotic and pure as his friends say. There may be no more harm in him than in the well-known dove. None the less, it might be well for Congress to consider whether his friends, affiliations, opinions and enthusiasms make him quite the man to train aviation mechanics for the United States Army.

much they may differ as to the value of the Dies committee revelations, citizens who disbelieve in Communism will agree that particular care should be taken to keep army and navy wholly free from it.

BUT what has this to do with the idea that a series of training

CHAPTER XIII
The Earl of Bemrose continued to describe the activities of Lady Matresser's son:

"Perhaps I have said more than I ought to have said. Still, just before the Abyssinian war I do know that he was the first person sent for by the permanent Foreign Secretary, that he had appointments with Cabinet Ministers and that sort of thing for a fortnight and everyone considered his opinion extraordinarily valuable. Master Ronald does not go about the world with his eyes closed, you know."

"You are giving me new ideas about my son," she acknowledged. "I hope to heavens I am not making mischief," Bemrose exclaimed. "I am just telling you what I have heard said. On the other hand he has never shown the slightest signs of any ambition to take a governorship or anything of that sort so the whole thing seems to lead nowhere. That is why I am glad of your news that he is thinking of settling down. There are so few of the old order."

"Nothing except keep this quiet," Matresser insisted earnestly. "Don't let a soul know what has happened. I understand, sir, perfectly."

Matresser turned his head. His loader stepped forward. "You will excuse me, your lordship," he said. "Humphreys' whistle went two minutes ago. The birds are coming over the knoll. The young ladies are the beckoning to you."

Matresser snatched up one of his guns and hurried off. Elisabeth Stammer greeted him with a curious look of apprehension in her eyes. "Why were you talking to that little man for so long while all these pheasants were getting away?" she asked.

Matresser exercised the privilege of a man with a gun. He went on shooting and remained silent.

At dinner that evening the Countess of Matresser made what was almost an official announcement. She had been talking for some time of her son to the Earl of Bemrose, who was seated on her right.

"Ronald has practically given me his word," she confided, "that his wanderings are over. He is going to settle down and do his duty to his neighbors. We have been without a man here long enough."

"It will be good news for the County, of course," he admitted, "and as you know, the Lord Lieutenant is his for the asking. On the other hand, I cannot help wondering sometimes whether he will be quite content."

"I might share that fear," she confessed, "if only there had been more point about Ronnie's travels. If he had been an explorer, for instance, or a climber, had discovered new countries or sailed in strange seas and written about these places then I could have sympathized with him, but he wanders off without any fixed intentions. He shoots a great deal, of course, but a healthy man's appetite for that sort of thing must decline before middle age. He seems to have the real wanderlust. Do you know that when he goes away we can only correspond with him through an office in London? He forwards our letters to him and he writes to us care of them. He makes no plans. There is no system what ever about his travels."

Bemrose twirled his gray mouse. "I sometimes wonder whether you quite do your son justice, Lady Matresser," he said. "Don't you think it possible that he may be doing a little work we none of us know anything about?"

"Do you really believe that?" she asked curiously. "Have you ever heard anything that would lead you to think so?"

"Well, I would not go so far as that," was the cautious admission. "but I do know that the Foreign Office had sent for him several times before he went abroad and I have heard it said by people who ought to know that if only he would work on more rigid lines he would be invaluable to the government."

"First time I have ever heard such a thing kind at," Lady Matresser confessed frankly.

served in the Great House and a few minutes later a fluttering little course of women followed their hostess to the drawingrooms. Matresser left the place and came down to the other end of the table to where his principal male guests were seated. The port was reverently sipped.

"What happened to Andrews?" a neighbor asked his host.

"He was fetched away while we were shooting Sheddons' Wood," Matresser replied. "The chap he picked up after an accident and to whom he played the good Samaritan had the bad taste to peg out."

"Such a careful fellow—Andrews," Bemrose remarked. "I wonder he came out at all if the man was in any danger."

"Concussion is a queer thing," Matresser reflected leaning forward

"brought a fifty-ton ketch into port in the midst of that storm the other night. Quite an achievement, but he and his men all got a little knocked about."

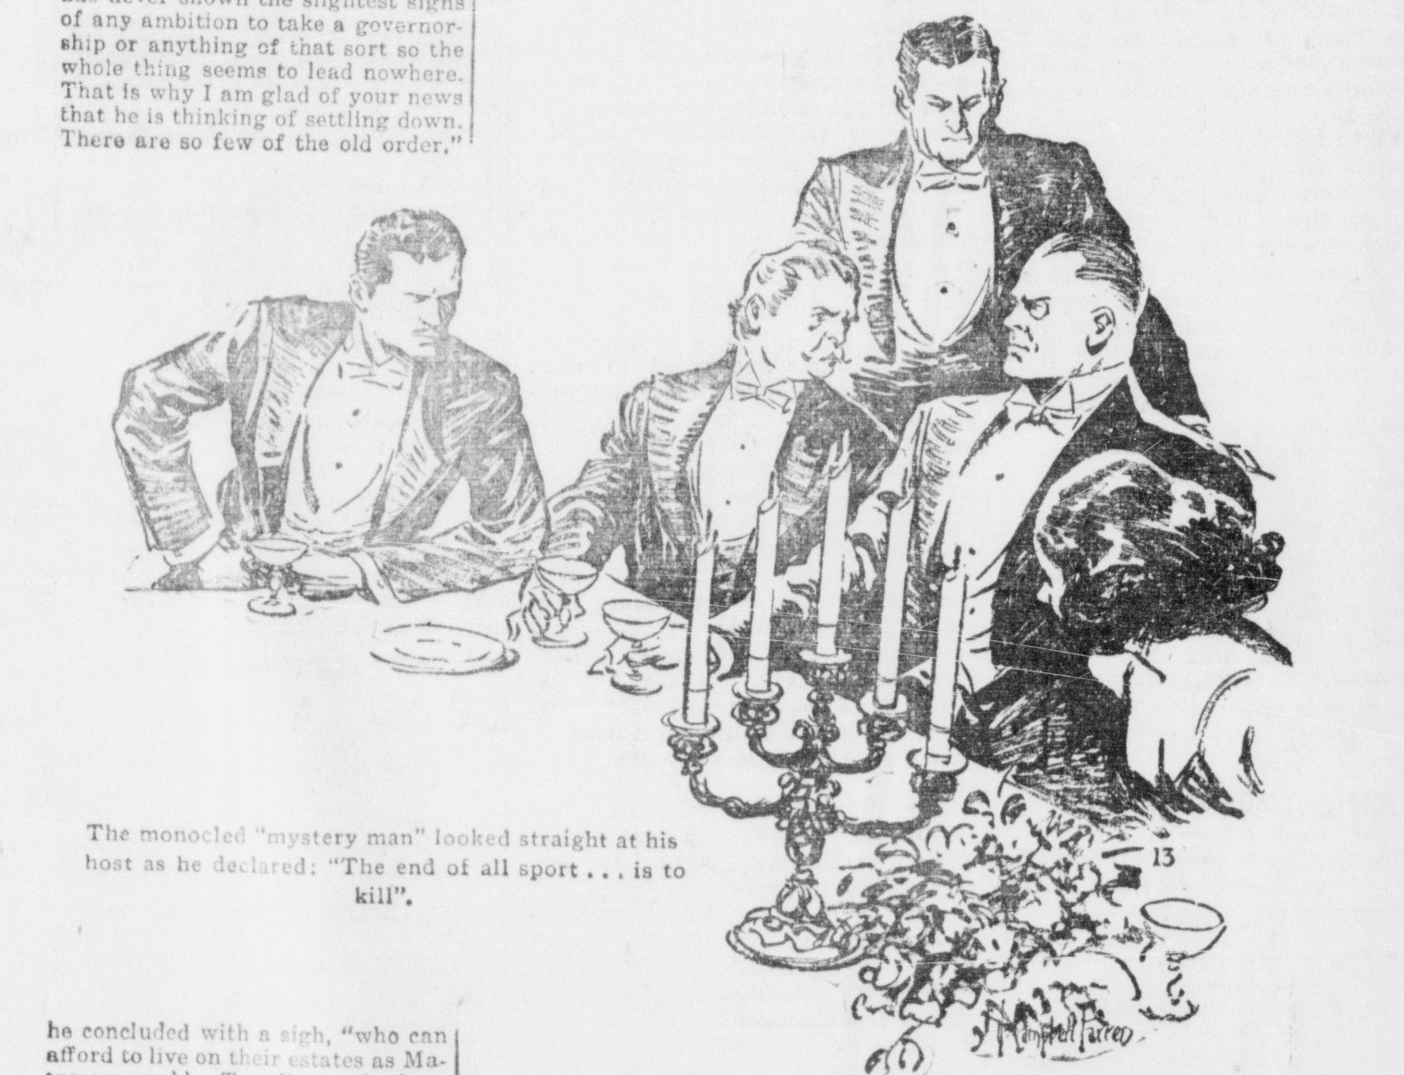

"I myself have recovered," van Westreene announced. "A slight sprain—not more. My steward, however, must go to the hospital. This poor fellow who has died was injured by a fallen tree, I heard it said."

"That is what we understand," Matresser agreed.

Bemrose leaned forward in his place. Like all the other guests he was intrigued by this tawny Viking.

"In what part of Holland do you live, Mr. van Westreene?" he asked. "I have shot there twice with my friend Baron de Buyl."

"I own property some forty miles

The monocled "mystery man" looked straight at his host as he declared: "The end of all sport . . . is to kill."

he concluded with a sigh, "who can afford to live on their estates as Matresser could. To tell you the honest truth, I only kept on the County this last year because I was horrified when I heard who my successor was likely to be. If Ronald will play up it will be a great load off my mind."

"Well, as I told you, I have almost a promise from him," Lady Matresser said.

"You will have to face his marrying, of course, her neighbor reminded her.

"My dear Charles," she replied, "don't you know me well enough to realize that nothing in the world would make me happier than that? The Dover House here is a perfect gem of a place and I have refused to let it, except yearly, just hoping that Ronnie would turn sensible. I should be the happiest woman in the world there."

The conversation halted for a few moments. The Countess's neighbor on her other side leaned towards her. "Lady Alice has been telling me of this shocking affair in the village," she said.

"I am so sorry for Dr. Andrews," Lady Matresser confided. "Of course, everyone will say that he ought to have sent a man as ill as that to the hospital; certainly not to have left him alone with the housekeeper while he shot today. I dare say, though, there's some further explanation."

"I heard," Bemrose observed, "that he was supposed to be down here with letters for someone or other in the neighborhood."

"We have heard nothing," the Countess declared.

"Seems queer after our recent conversation," Bemrose went on. "But Grantley, my second boy, you know, who is in the Foreign Office, had an idea that this man came from there. We must ask Matresser if he knows anything about it."

Old world habits were strictly observed.

and helping himself to nuts. "Is it my fancy, Rowans," he went on, addressing a vis-à-vis, "or is this '70 getting a little thin? I always look upon you as a great connoisseur."

"It is one of the most perfect bottles of a marvelous vintage I ever tasted," was the emphatic reply.

"I find it wonderful," Bemrose acquiesced. "To go back to this poor fellow, though. Shouldn't you say that it was a little unusual, Matresser, for a man who has been properly vetted and left in the care of a very respectable woman like Andrews' housekeeper—an old nurse, too, she was—to die suddenly?"

"Unusual, I suppose," Matresser agreed. "but that sort of thing happens every day."

"Poor little Andrews is all fussed up about it, anyway," Rowans observed. "He went off to Aylsham to see the coroner and then to Norwich to the hospital."

"I hadn't heard that," Matresser admitted with a distinct frown.

"One of your keepers told me. I went down into the gunroom before dinner to ask for my guns to be ready early as I have to get over to Hatherley Hall. That long chap who looks after your Merton beat had just got back from leaving the doctor some pheasants and heard the news from the housekeeper."

A mighty figure, his wine glass in his hand, rose from a distant place and approached the spot where his host was seated. With a stiff comprehensive bow he sank into a vacant place.

"You will perhaps pardon me if I join you," he said. "I was interested, or should I say grieved, to hear that one of my fellow victims of Monday night's storm was dead."

"Mr. van Westreene," Matresser explained to the others around, from the de Buyl estates," was the measured reply. "I am, however, seldom there. I have interests in other countries. Only lately I returned from a seven months' cruise. I am fond of the sea."

"Do any deep sea fishing?" "Off the coast of New Zealand," Mr. van Westreene recounted, "I have landed two tuna fish of between five and six hundred pounds each. It is a dangerous sport but it lacks variety."

"Tell us," Bemrose asked, "what then is your favorite sport, van Westreene? You have shot lions without a doubt."

"And every description of wild beast," was the deep throated reply. "As to my favorite sport, you ask me a difficult question."

It was probably by chance just at that moment that he looked across the table straight into the eyes of his host. The hesitation became a pause. There was a little quiver at the corners of Matresser's lips.

"Perhaps," the latter said, "to answer that question, Mr. van Westreene, you would require a definition of sport."

To all appearance, Mr. van Westreene remained the weather battered sphinx with unchanging expression. There was no sign of discomposure in his smooth face. His fixed eyeglass seemed as though it had been there since the day of his birth and would remain without a quiver until the day of his death. Even his deep voice when he answered retained its toneless quality.

"The end of all sport," he pronounced, "as sport is understood by man, is to kill."

There was a little murmur of qualified dissent. . . .

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL

Superimposing a swift, action-full story on a background of social condition and principle, Republic's "I Stand Accused" showing at the Bristol Theatre, emerges as worthy entertainment, striking the bell for drama, thrills and romantic interest.

Republic has presented Robert Cummings and Tom Beck as two law graduates fresh from college who become partners in law. But making a living is tough, as we all know, and Cummings forgets his principles when an opportunity arises to make real money protecting a gangster. The sight of his mother slaving in drudgery convinces Cummings to stay on as an underworld mouthpiece. Beck on the other hand remains true to his legal oath, and the difference splits the partners and life-long pals, despite the peace attempts of their pretty secretary, Helen Mack, whom they both love.

The story stirringly presents this theme of what a young lawyer is supposed to do to make a living in an overcrowded profession. The plot drives the characters to a dramatically vibrant and exciting finish as the careers of the two former friends clash and they find themselves on the opposite sides of a courtroom. Cummings finally sees the light, and makes a supreme self-sacrifice to help Beck, a member of the District Attorney's staff, win his case against the underworld. But Beck is too proud to accept evidence from Cummings and Cummings has to settle the question at the risk of his own life.

Farical, funny, fast-moving and grand entertainment. That's what the critics are saying about "Vacation from Love," which teams two of the most promising young players in pictures, Dennis O'Keefe and Florence Rice, for the first time. The picture will be at the Grand Theatre today only.

Here is a picture which affords both Miss Rice and O'Keefe the kind of roles actors dream of playing. The story, by Paterson McNutt and Harlan Ware, is a succession of comedy situations in a basically strong plot. Director George Fitzmaurice, a veteran of 23 years' experience, is noted for his handling of light comedy. Also featured in the cast are Reginald Owen and June Knight, who introduces a new song, "Let's Pretend It's True."

CIRCLE HONORS TWO MEMBERS ON THEIR 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Silver Cake Dishes Presented To Mrs. Roland Quinn, and Mrs. Jos. Talbot

The Social Circle of First Baptist Church held a meeting last evening in the Sunday School room, 60 members attending. Business was followed by a social hour. Games were played and prizes won by Mrs. William Marshall, Doris Clifton, Miss Laura Ellis, Mrs. Joseph Talbot and Mrs. Edward Praul. Two members celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary, Mrs. Roland Quinn and Mrs. Joseph Talbot, were presented with silver cake dishes, in behalf of the Circle. Two new members were accepted, Mrs. Katharine Quinn and Mrs. William Quinn.

The hostesses were: Miss Noma Johnson, Mrs. Edgar Klaiber, Mrs. Edward Kelber, Sr., Mrs. William Lilley, Mrs. Gilbert Lovett, Mrs. William Marshall, Mrs. Allen Barr.

was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for five years and directed to pay one-third of the costs at the rate of $5 a week.

Eugene Daugherty received one-third the costs, and 4 months to 5 years in the Bucks County Prison. William Daugherty received one-third the costs and 8 months to 5 years in the Bucks County Prison.

Walter C. Churchray, 22, and Victor Goscielski, 21, Bristol, pleaded guilty before Judge Boyer to felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods. County Detective Anthony Russo testified that the defendants stole a battery and flashlight from a Bristol Township garage on December 3rd, and at Edgely stole some other things on December 17th.

Judge Boyer suspended sentence on each defendant but directed that they pay one-half the costs of prosecution and repay the people for the property stolen and placed them on probation for 3 years.

Judge Boyer yesterday sustained an appeal in the case of H. D. Rosengarten, 714 Lawson avenue, Upper Darby, who was arrested on a charge of reckless driving last August, in Riegelsville by a special officer. The Court remarked that there was a lack of evidence that the defendant operated the car in question.

Judge Keller yesterday sentenced Fenton Robert Miller, 33, Rochester, N. Y., to pay a fine of $200 and costs after he had pleaded guilty to driving while drunk on December 17th on the Bethlehem pike near Quakertown.

Walter J. Dickert, 37, of near Shelly, pleaded guilty before Judge Keller to a charge of drunken driving on December 20th in Bodminsterville. Dickert was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs.

CELTICS DROP SEVENTH STRAIGHT CAGE TILT

The Celtics dropped their seventh straight game of the first half of the Bristol Basketball League last night, being downed by the Falls Township Alumni five, 49-31.

The Celts were outclassed from the start as the Falls boys started to roll in points from the opening whistle until Tim Tentiucci sounded his horn, signifying the end of the contest.

Teamwork was instrumental in the victory of the Falls group. Their plays were worked so that every player was given an equal opportunity of scoring the same number of points and this really happened with the starting five sharing honors with those who were given a chance later in the tilt.

The Courtmen were lead in scoring by the same "Jimmy" Lake who scored almost one-half of their points, accounting for six double-deckers and three fouls.

The banner games of the first half will be played tomorrow night when the Hibs meet Manhattan and St. Ann's is matched with the Goodwill five. A victory for St. Ann's and the Hibs will end the first half in a triple tie while a Goodwill triumph gives them the coveted first half honors.

GRUNDY FIVE LOSES TO ROHM & HAAS, 36 TO 32

The Grundy five did not take enough shots at the basket last night in the second game played on the Italian Mutual Aid court as it bowed to the Rohm and Haas five, 36-32, in a closely-played game.

The woolen-twisters had plenty of opportunities of registering points as they passed rapidly into the fifteen foot mark, but instead of taking a try at the net the players would pass back to the thrower to wait for another opening.

The chemical workers took advantage of this delayed shooting and by their own "freezing" method kept their four point edge throughout the last three minutes to garner the triumph.

The Maple Beach team would have had a much easier time of it if Tommy Muffett hadn't pick the last five minutes of the game to exhibit his scoring powers. After being held scoreless throughout, Tommy counted three twin-pointers in fast succession to make a big dent in the Rohm and Haas lead.

Winning field goals for the chemical workers were made by Dougherty, Weideman and Cahall. These three were also high scorers for the Engamen while defensively, Cole and Massilia stood out.

With ten points to his credit, Jesse Vansant led the losers while the work of Burke and Bill Hart stood out on the defense.

BENSALEM GIRLS LOSE TO TAYLOR SCHOOL GIRLS

COINWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 4—The Bensalem Owl girls were added to the long list of victims who fell prey to the Taylor Business School girls basketball team when Miss Smith's sextet succumbed before the college lassies, here, yesterday afternoon to the tune of 47-23. The decision marked the 39th in a row for the Taylor girls' outfit, who were last beaten by Rider College girls' team back in the 1936-37 season.

In the preliminary tilt of the afternoon, the Bensalem J. V. sextet pushed the Taylor Junior Varsity girls to the limit before bowing to them, 19-16. Eleanor Hughes starred for the Bensalem Jayvees.

SOME BIGGEST BESTS AND WORSTS OF 1938

By Lawton Carver

(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(INS)—By way of ringing out the old year and bringing in the new, herewith is a compilation of some of the biggest and bests and worsts of 1938, with each and every one of them subject to dispute.

Biggest disappointment: War Admiral-Sea Biscuit $100,000 match race which was not held at Belmont after weeks of ballyhoo.

Best display of ferocity: Joe Louis knocking out Max Schmeling and breaking the German's back in less than a round.

Biggest football upset: Carnegie Tech 20, Pittsburgh 19; and runnerup for the honors' defeat of Notre Dame by Southern California.

Most promising young fighter: Lou Nova, who stopped Gunnar Barlund and gave Tommy Farr the worst licking he has sustained in an American ring.

Man who did most for old age security: Larry McPhail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who added Lester Stripp, Sewell, etc., to the roster.

Biggest splash: Tony Galento vs Harry Thomas at Philadelphia.

Most profitable conversion of racket into racket: Don Budge signed $75,000 contract for professional tour.

Best ground fight: Helen Wills Moody, beating Helen Jacobs in the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Outstanding animal trainer: Joseph Vincent McCarthy, who, with some assistance from the Yankees, made the Cubs roll over and play dead in four straight games in the world series.

Biggest laugh: Jack Doyle, the crooning Irish heavyweight, who immediately announced a determined comeback campaign after knocking himself out.

Finest display of gameness: Farr in the 14th round against Nova, with close runners-up Barney Ross' game stand in losing his welter title to Henry Armstrong and Freddy Steele in being stopped by Fred Apostoli.

Highlight of tragedy: Finish of the career of Stratton, young Chicago White Sox pitcher, whose leg was amputated following gun-shot wound.

Most thrilling baseball performance: Dizzy Dean's pitching against the Yankees in the second game of the world series until his arm wilted.

Most frustrated: Babe Ruth, who was let out as a coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers but still hopes eventually to manage a major league club.

Best display of iron play in golf match: Paul Runyan's 8 and 7 defeat over slugging Sam Snead.

Outstanding marathoner: Lou Gehrig who stretched his consecutive game streak to more than 2,000 games and finished still going strong.

Biggest squawk: Carnegie Tech's trade against referee who got downs mixed up and cost Carnegie the ball and the game against Notre Dame.

Fast human feat: Glenn Cunningham's, which carried him to a 4:04.4 mile—cracking all records.

Best comeback among family men: Max Baer, who may yet challenge Louis for the title he once held.

Biggest flop: Pittsburgh Pirates in National League pennant race.

Best comeback among all comebacks: Helen Wills Moody.

Happiest smile: Gabby Hartnett's after he had led the Cubs to the pennant as mid-season successor to Charlie Grimm.

Saddest Puss: Gabby Hartnett's in the dressing room after the fourth game of the world series.

Most optimistic: Connie Mack, now 76 years old and determined to win one more pennant with the Athletics.

Biggest buildup for the biggest let-down: Jimmy Adamick, touted as heavyweight contender and finally a flop.

Biggest business man among the golfers: Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, West Va., who won more than $19,000 in tournament play.

Most acclaimed by the experts: Davey O'Brien, pass-throwing quarterback of the Texas Christian football team.

G. O. P. Controls Both Houses of Assembly

The election of Senator Gelder as president pro tempore came under dramatic circumstances. Senator Eroe and two other Democratic Senators—Joseph P. Dando, Luzerne, and Dr. P. J. Henney, Allegheny—were absent when the Senate convened more than an hour late to transact its business.

Eroe turned up three hours late. Dando, the Democrats charged, "took a flight to Oklahoma" and, commented Democratic Senator John Dent, Westmoreland, "I think he struck out there."

Henney, faced with a Supreme Court order which made him choose between his state senatorship and his post as Allegheny County coroner, resigned the former and although the Democrats asked him to appear and vote he failed to do so.

CHIEF LITTLE WOLF TO TANGLE WITH MARTIN

TRENTON, Jan. 4—Chief Little Wolf, colorful and popular Navajo Indian, will tangle with Richard 'Bull' Martin, Trenton's own rowdy heavyweight contender, in the feature bout on Promoter Johnny Ipp's first wrestling show of the new year. It will be over the best two fall out of three, 90 minute time limit route and a rousing contest is expected to ensue.

Martha earned the right to this match by his victories in the last two Arena shows. He downed Slammie Sammy Cohen and Chief Chewacki, the mad gypsy, for two sterling wins.

Last Wednesday, Little Wolf and Bibber McCoy, top-notch Boston contender, struggled for 90 gruelling minutes to a deadlock, in one of the hardest fought battles ever witnessed here.

Hans Steinke, the powerful German, who made his first appearance at the Arena last week, will vie with Karl Davis, rowdy southerner, in the semi-feature that is attracting almost as much attention as the feature bout.

Pat Corrigan, the popular and classy Irish youngster, will face his old enemy Angelo Leone, quick Italian, Frank Brown, versatile Texan, meets Chris Zaharlas, and Frenchy LaRue, Roebeling veteran, trades grips with Sammy Menacher, New York Hebrew.

The first bout will start at 8.30 and Ipp states that there is a heavy advance sale.

Seek To End Taxi Strike

New York, Jan. 4—Effectiveness of a city-wide taxicab strike was disputed today as Mayor LaGuardia attempted to bring it to an early conclusion.

With police on emergency duty to prevent a recurrence of the violence that marked the 1934 walkout of taxicab drivers, LaGuardia invited representatives of the strikers and operators to a City Hall conference to which he was expected to suggest that the dispute be placed before a State Mediation Board. Union leaders, demanding a contract providing for a 9 hour day and an increased share for drivers in company receipts, estimated the walkout would effect 11,000 men operating some 5,000 cabs and 2,000 maintenance men.

INAUGURATE ACTION TO STOP ATTACKS

By Tom R. Brislin
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 4—Incensed at threats and attacks made against football officials at five games during the past season, the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association has inaugurated a drive to stamp out "ungentlemanly" and "unsportsmanlike" action on the part of coaches and spectators.

Emund C. Wicht, secretary of the P. I. A. A., determined "to nip the evil in the bud," declared that the "vicious practices of hoodlums" would be stamped out.

At the same time, Wicht disclosed that efforts will be made by the Association to meet with high school officials, police, civic organizations, and newspaper editors throughout the State in an attempt to create sentiment and public opinion towards elimination of unsportsmanlike tactics.

The Association's campaign to curb "riot-inciting" coaches and to stamp out "hoodlum" practices marked the first time in history that such action has been attempted.

Wicht, in a statement, declared: "We have learned spectators come to games with the sole purpose of stirring up trouble and endangering officials. It is principally to devise ways and means by which the public in general may assist school officials in preventing such deplorable actions that conferences are being arranged."

The movement, Wicht indicated, would also include a drive against drinking and gambling at scholastic events and to ban "grandstand" decisions by non-working officials watching plays from the stands.

On the matter of what he termed "riot-inciting" coaches, Wicht had this to say:

"To those few coaches who insist on leaving the bench, walking up and down the sidelines gesticulating wildly, or running on the playing field to protest the decision of an official we give solemn warning that such demonstrations only bring disgrace on the coaching profession.

"Too, such action by coaches is laden with potential explosive which needs only the detonator of their objectionable conduct to shatter the restraint of blindly enthusiastic fans, with the ultimate result—a riot."

Wicht said that, under the rules, "football officials have complete charge while the game is played."

"Their decisions," he asserted, "are to be regarded as final. If the officials are found incompetent, biased, or unfair, the coach has recourse to the district committee or board of control of the PIAA. His complaints will be heard and a decision reached according to the orderly procedure adopted by PIAA member schools."

The association warned that the "small but potent hysterically-inclined element found in all public assemblies" needed only a spark generated by a coach's "antagonistic and threatening" gestures to inflame a "full-fledged case of hysteria and a mob last for arbiters of the game."

Wicht said that the board of control of the association was determined that further attacks or near-attacks on officials would not be tolerated and warned that future breaches by coaches might bring expulsion to those "who can not practice self-control."

He said that in every case reported to the district committee or the board of control this year it has been charged that attacks on officials by the crowd were the direct result of the coach publicly protesting an official's decision. Wicht said that the riot thus "unthinkingly incited" during or after the contest resulted in some instances in physical injury to the official or officials.

Conferences would be scheduled, he said.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1938
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD.—Most extraordinary feature of the picture "Juarez," has been overlooked up to now. Many of the top players never meet in the story. Thus Bette Davis appears in the same film with Paul Muni but they will have no scenes together.

Miss Davis, who plays the Empress Carlotta, likewise will not be on the screen at the same time with Claude Rains, as Napoleon, or John Garfield, as Diaz.

Similarly, the paths of Muni and Brian Aherne (the Emperor Maximilian) do not cross.

Off hand, I can't think of another film where this unusual situation has prevailed.

The reports that Whitney Bourne received back all of her stolen jewelry are erroneous. The most expensive pieces are still missing.

Heard several people comment after the preview of "Dawn Patrol" on the excellent German spoken by Donald Crisp in the scenes where he acted as interpreter.

A fact not generally known is that Crisp served in the British Intelligence in the World War and, at one time, worked in Belgium behind the German lines.

Crisp has written a spy story suggested by his experiences and Warners may buy it for a picture.

The Hal Roach studio has announced that a newcomer, Francine Bordeaux, will play the feminine lead in "Captain Fury." But it didn't add that she's the actress who hit the headlines a while back by suing to abrogate a contract giving her agent the right to supervise what books she read, whom she went with and many other details of her private life.

Nomination for best B picture of 1938: R-K-O's "A Man to Remember."

Number one feminine discovery of year probably will turn out to be Hedy Lamarr. M-G-M let her languish for months without an assignment. Walter Wanger borrowed her for "Algiers" and made her an overnight sensation. No. 1 Hollywood tragedy of year was the death of Jack Doer, just as he was showing in schools. Sandra Rambeau, who certainly gets around, was at the Club 17 in a party with Jim Bryant and Edmond Goulding. Warren Hymer is carrying on in the latest "Mr. Moto" film despite an attack of flu and three stitches over his eye (it happened at tennis). Sally Clark and her new bridegroom were rumbling at La Conga. Herbert Marshall and John McLain tagging at the same spot. This is the latest phenomenon of Hollywood night life. Dozens of stars.

Wicht revealed, with school superintendents, principals, athletic directors, coaches, student body representatives, local police chiefs, representatives of service clubs, churches and the Boy Scouts.

"The idea," Wicht concluded, "is to bring the schools and communities together through representatives of various organizations to create sentiment and public opinion against unfavorable action of coaches and 'hoodlums' at school contests."

Cruisers Leave for Canal Zone

The chap who wrote that much-discussed story about Hollywood couples will find it tougher to get studio entree now. Wonder why Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor always ask Skinnay Ennis, Victor Hugo maestro, to play "Stomping at the Savoy"? They dance ONLY to this number. H. M. Warner plans to offer his company's patriotic short subjects free for showing in schools.
